

David Elliott, Director of the Centre, was Executive Director of the Catesby Commemorative Trust from its founding in 2002 and was executive producer of The Curious Mister Catesby documentary. He was educated at Dartington Hall School in England, where he developed his interest in natural history, and Trinity College in Connecticut. He retired from a thirty-seven-year career at Procter & Gamble as director of international trade and has served as deputy assistant secretary at the U.S. Department of Commerce. He was founder and first chairman of the Kiawah Conservancy, which is devoted to the protection of wildlife habitat. In 2019 he was awarded the prestigious Order of the Palmetto by the Governor of South Carolina for his work in environmental conservation and education.